欧州古武道協会

EKA

The purpose of the European Kobudo Association is to exchange information, experiences, practicing and demonstrating classical Japanese martial arts (koryu kobudo & shin kobudo), and old European Bujutsu traditions, the 'Big Three' (see below), on a free, voluntary, and friendly basis.

Organizations and individuals can participate freely in the activities of the European Kobudo Association.

European (international) law applies.

Everyone has their own responsibility of what he writes or does.

You will not commit to the European Kobudo Association,
it is a voluntary commitment.

Participants in the activities comply with the Precepts of the Bushi.

The annual meeting of the kobudo organisations will take place in week 19 (second week of May) at the address of an organization involved within the European Kobudo Association. After the meeting and other activities, there will be a feast of the members of the European Kobudo Association.

All participants in activities (demonstrations and other activities) comply with the rules of the organizing organization (as guest).

Presentation of all participant organisations or individuals on the website of the European Kobudo Association (EKA)

will contain:

- Name of Martial arts tradition (koryu kobudo, shin kobudo or European Jujutsu tradition):
  - Name(s) of Martial art(s):
  - Date founded/date affiliated with (shin)koryu:
    - Founder of the tradition:

  - Present headmaster and/or representative:
    - Address, E-mail and website:
    - Field notes (max 2500 letters):
      - Remarks:
  - One photo (300 dpi)

If an organization and/or an individual wants his information to be removed from the EKA website, this will be done as soon as possible, at least within a month.

The European Kobudo Association is based (almost) on the same goals and activities as the Nippon Kobudo Kyokai in Japan (see: Nippon Budokan (2011).

Budo - The Martial Ways of Japan. Tokyo: Nippon Budokan), it is a promotional organisation.

The 'Big Three' of affiliated organisations or individuals:

1. Koryu kobudo

The oldest group are the koryu bujutsu (koryu kobudo) and are recognized as tradition martial arts of Japan by Nihon Kobudo Kyokai (日本古武道協会) and the Nihon Kobudo Shinkokai (日本古武道振興会), both Japanese promotional organisations. They are representing the martial heritage of Japan. It is estimated that there are somewhat more than hundred original martial arts academies still in operation in Japan:

2. Shin kobudo

An other group are the Shin bujutsu (shin kobudo). They are actually not really new. Mostly they are old martial traditions who deceased, or a tradition where the curriculum was not handed down from generation to generation or with no legitimate license of the last living headmaster. In some cases they are people who separated themselves from the old traditional martial arts academies (koryu). Also often it concerns academies who died but left enough written material (scrolls, books, notes etc.) to revive them by autodidactic competent people. There is also the possibility that martial artists are founding new schools and organize them in much the same way as the koryu (this is also true for some academies outside Japan, see 3.). Sometimes new bujutsu styles are put together to have a larger curriculum with more variety. In most cases these new bujutsu act in much the same way as the old martial arts academies and often with great enthusiasm and skill. There are a significant number of this kind of schools and they often presents themselves on the internet, books and other multimedia. It is impossible to give an estimation of the number of practioners. I estimate that there are more new bujutsu ryu than koryu bujutsu. Nevertheless often the techniques (waza) of these school are beautiful and inspired by the old martial traditions. Many of these new schools are organized in federations much similar to the Budo federations and have in some cases also contact with Western groups and federations. A list of many (including koryu kobudo) kobudo ryu which will be admitted:

3. Old European Bujutsu (Oshu Kobudo) traditions

Since the beginning of the 20th century there are European Bujutsu (mostly Jujutsu) schools. Also they are original traditional martial arts academies within Europe. If there is more than one generation (schools are proven to be older than 1988), then they also admitted to European Kobudo Association.
